Employment and Social Inclusion in Europe: Ways Forward for the Young Jobless Generation

Overview

According to the European Commission, unemployment reached 24.6 million people in August 2014, out of which 5 million are aged 15 and 24. Millions of youngsters across Europe are struggling to find a job or to further their education, facing a world from which they increasingly feel disconnected with. The economic recession has forced many to accept unpaid internships or become long-term unemployed – which leads to a lack of confidence, social exclusion, poorer health, depression and even suicide. Without doubt, youth unemployment is a profound challenge to the future of Europe, with the costs of NEETs (young people not in education, employment or training) rising up to €153bn (1.21% of GDP) a year – in benefits and foregone earnings and taxes, according to Eurofound.

There is a need to promote urgent, targeted measures supporting young people's school-to-work transition, while investing in longer-term structural reforms. With a budget of €6 billion for the period 2014 - 2020, the Youth Employment Initiative aims to support NEETs in EU regions most affected by youth unemployment. Inspired by the national scheme in Finland, EU Member States are currently developing national Youth Guarantee Implementation Plans, to ensure that all youngsters under 25 receive a good-quality offer within 4 months of leaving education or becoming unemployed. Nevertheless, delivering on the objectives of a Youth Guarantee requires reforming education and training systems and reinforcing partnerships for reaching out to inactive young people not registered with an employment service. Thus, following the Council and European Parliament's Decision to improve the effectiveness of public employment services through closer cooperation, the Public Employment Services Network was launched in September 2014. It aims to support Member States further coordinate their policies and actions against unemployment.

This timely International Symposium provides an invaluable opportunity to discuss the challenges behind current unemployment trends in the EU. Delegates will have the opportunity to examine initiatives and innovative projects that have been implemented to tackle youth unemployment and social exclusion at national and EU levels. This Symposium will also allow delegates to exchange best practices and discuss solutions to boost employment in the EU.

“The labour market in Europe is constantly evolving. Therefore, also the skills, competences, and qualifications that people need change over time. People need to have a variety of skills and in particular transversal skills for employability and active citizenship, such as digital competences, entrepreneurship, etc. Unfortunately, evidence tells us that too many people in the EU still do not have these competences.”

- Godelieve Van den Brande, European Commission, DG Education and Culture.
November 2014

“Well-functioning and efficient Public Employment Services are essential to facilitate quick access to jobs and training for unemployed people across Europe. The new Network will contribute to their modernisation and reform across the EU. A number of Member States also need to reform their public employment services to successfully implement the Youth Guarantee and to help young unemployed and inactive people get a job or training. The new Network sends yet another strong signal that Europe is using all available tools to fight unemployment.”

- László Andor, former Commissioner for Employment, Social Affairs and Inclusion
